  Implementing crash recovery in an Object-Oriented Database System (OODBMS) raises several challenging issues for performance that are not present in traditional DBMSs. These performance concerns result both from significant architectural differences between OODBMSs and traditional database systems and differences in OODBMS's target applications. This paper compares the performance of several alternative approaches to implementing crash recovery in an OODBMS based on a client-server architecture. ...

1 Research track papers: Learning the unified kernel machines for classification   ▬
       Steven C. H. Hoi, Michael R. Lyu, Edward Y. Chang August 2006 Proceedings of the 12th ACM SIGKDD international conference on Knowledge discovery and data mining KDD '06
       Publisher: ACM Press
       Full text available: pdf(881.82 KB)   Additional Information: full citation, abstract, references, index terms

       Kernel machines have been shown as the state-of-the-art learning techniques for classification. In this paper, we propose a novel general framework of learning the Unified Kernel Machines (UKM) from both labeled and unlabeled data. Our proposed framework integrates supervised learning, semi-supervised kernel learning, and active learning in a unified solution. In the suggested framework, we particularly focus our attention on designing a new semi-supervised kernel learning method, i.e., Spectral ...

       In this article, we submit and compare two different but complementary approaches to the problem of protecting mobile agents in untrusted computing environments. The first alternative, a technique for protection of mobile agents built upon an asymmetric cryptographic system resistant to conventional cryptoanalysis techniques, is based on the application of one-time keys. The second solution, geared towards computing environments supporting public-key cryptographic systems, permits ...
